What is Haiku?

Haiku is the world's shortest poem.

Haiku was first written over 400 years ago.

Haiku is written by over 1 million Japanese.

Haiku originated in Japan but is now written in every country in the world.

Haiku when written in Japanese has 17 syllables.

Haiku when written in English usually has less than 17 syllables.

Haiku is written in 3 lines.

Haiku is about nature.

Haiku always mentions the season.

Haiku involves the senses: sight, sound, smell, taste, touch, and movement.

Haiku is always in the present—it is what is happening right here now.

Haiku does not use big words.

Haiku combined with a drawing or photograph is called haiga.

Haiku without a season word is called a senryu and is about human nature.

Haiku is a snapshot using words.

Haiku means “funny or unusual lines.”

Haiku is wabi-sabi.

Haiku is a moment that makes you say: “Aha.”

Haiku has 34,500,000 hits on Google.

ANGELA'S HAIKU

outside
the business school
workers take a break

Halloween windstorm
planes and witches grounded

his rubber boots
left out in the rain
he asks for a refill

I tell her
white hair suits her autumn rain

prize pumpkins—
he tells me
I don't measure up

geese on the lake
I sink
into a warm bath

fly and I rubbing our hands
cold house

through exhaust fumes
a lone cyclist's
white breath

in deep thought
she wades
in the shallow end

fading light
I count the buds
on the Christmas cactus

Christmas Eve-
Snuggled in bed
waiting to Hear the Sleigh
bells

Candy-
My basket's full
With chocclate

Sweet candy-
Chips and chocolate
Treats

Wind-Tres down
Leaves cover the Ground

Power down-
Tv closed
Lights out getting Chilly

Haunted house-
Frightening masks and costumes
Darkenss

Grandma's baby-
Cake and candlles
Presnts and hugs smiles

Sowny day-
Streets are covered in the white Stuff

Christmas Eve-
Snuggled in bed
Waiting to hear the sleign Bells

My brithday day-Trunning 14 year old
Being happy

Moive night-
Ate popcorn
Very full Can't sleep
